For Your Home, Business or Event

Enviro Eco Solutions (E²) provides an Integrated Pest Management (IPM) strategy to combat your pest problem. Our belief in pest management should combine numerous techniques of mechanical, physical and chemical controls to have the best outcome possible. Our professional Pest Control Specialists are equipped with the knowledge and skills to reduce insects from your area using a combination of these controls.

Nothing is worse than an unwanted house guest who just won't leave! From flies to rodents and everything in between, you never know what a new season will bring around in your home. Sometimes it takes a professional to help, and our Pest Specialists can provide a quick and efficient service to get your home free of visitors.

Say goodbye to unwanted guests (and keep them from coming back)

Mosquito control should be a top priority, not only because they are annoying pests during outdoor fun, but also because they can spread dangerous diseases. Begin treating your yard and minimizing potential mosquito breeding grounds and mosquito shelter areas. For personal protection, you can use Mosquito Barrier which is an all-natural, super strong, liquid garlic-based formula that will keep pests like mosquitoes out of your yard. It does not contain chemicals so it is environmentally safe and safe for animals and humans. It will keep pests away for 24 hours.

For more personal protection against these bugs, try our new essential oil bug bars!

Simply rub on your skin to repel flies and mosquitoes naturally. Comes in a variety of scents such as citronella, lavender, and peppermint as well as our secret blends, Calm & Conquer, Bug Off and Triple Threat! And of course, we have our

Summer pests

While several species of wasps can be beneficial to gardens as pollinators, others can cause harm to homes and people. Wasp stings can be painful for most and can cause anaphylactic shock in those who are allergic. That is why it is imperative to control wasp nests around your property. Hornets and wasps, including yellow jackets, are different species of pests, they are frequently associated together and the steps to get rid of yellow jackets, wasps, and hornets are very similar.

The following are steps you can take to help keep wasps and hornets away from your home:

1. Clean outdoor trash cans frequently and always keep the lids on tight
2. Keep leaves and yard debris swept up and orderly
3. Keep bushes and trees properly pruned
4. Empty standing water from bird baths, rain gutters, animal dishes, and other items that collect rainwater

Spiders aren't as troublesome as other pests in a day-to-day living environment. They usually only cause issues when there are large numbers of them or they intrude on your daily activities. Other than just being super freaky, one of the bigger threats they pose is biting you while you sleep, as they are usually nocturnal and will occasionally go out searching for food at night.

Ants are on the lookout for food and water, and this is often inside your home. The best approach to ant control in the home is cleanliness. Any type of food or food particles can attract and provide food for ants. Store food in tight containers. Reduce moisture sources, including condensation and leaks. Inspections and locating the nests are key to control because ants are social insects. Large numbers of individual ants can be killed without ever solving the problem. Determine the kind of ant species. Most species of ants never enter buildings; others build their nests near buildings and forage indoors. Others usually nest indoors.

To prevent ant infestations, remember to clean up food spills and crumbs, keep screens repaired, repair cracks and crevices, and keep plants and bushes from touching the exterior of your home.

Bed Bug Heat Treatment Specialists

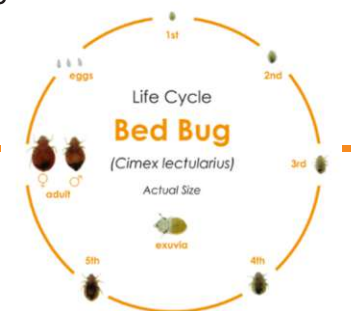

We're #1 in Northern Ontario.

Summer often means getaways and vacations, and with this, comes bedbugs. Anywhere you stay, you should do a bed bug inspection before you unpack and settle in. Just taking a few minutes to check your room out can save you the headache and anxiety of a bed bug infestation.

Heat treatments are a safer and the most effective method that kills all life stages of the bed bug in one treatment. This one-time 24-hour event allows us to kill all bed bugs in the area, including ones hiding in the cracks and crevices of furniture, baseboards, wallpaper and bedding. When you choose a heat treatment over spraying, you are choosing to avoid harmful chemicals in your home and ensure no stragglers are left behind following the treatment.

Bed bugs have a million places to hide where vacuums and sprays can't reach. Treating with heat allows us to get rid of the problem fast so you and your family can rest easy again.

Don't let the bed bugs bite. Call to speak with one of our specialists.

PROTECTING YOUR PARENTS RETIREMENT FUND

"Your home is the biggest investment of your life!" Does this sound familiar?

It's a true sentiment for many retirees. When it comes time to downsize one's home after years of raising a family and living in the same neighbourhood, the monetary amount they receive is incredibly important! This money then goes towards the future. For example, some may need the funds to pay for long-term care or retirement living facilities which can cost upwards of $4,000 a month!

Since becoming a real estate agent I've seen far too many people undersell their homes due to a lack of knowledge of today's real estate market. Some elderly sellers miss out on $50,000 - $60,000 in sale price. I don't have to explain how detrimental this can be for someone's quality of life after leaving their home. Most retirees aren't as educated as necessary in the new age of real estate. They may know someone in the business from 40 years ago. While experience networking and selling homes remains important, a lack of experience in marketing and social media can be detrimental when it comes to achieving the highest dollar value for one's home.

Being a successful real estate agent used to be all about the people you know, solely about word of mouth and shaking hands. Before the internet, you would sell a house because of how connected you were. You knew the sellers of the home and you connected them with buyers that you also knew. But the market has CHANGED. In this era of real estate, you need to be thoroughly versed in the importance of social media reach and consumer perception.

(Selling Their House)

Here are the 5 MUST-HAVES that very few agents in Sudbury are executing:

1. Professional Staging

On average, a staged home sells for 6% more if has been effectively staged. This means, replacing older furniture pieces with modernized pieces (if able), adding artwork and decor pieces, new paint where needed, and even plants to help the photos really pop. Our stagers will also recommend areas to declutter and rearrange pieces to open up a space! In the Sudbury market, we are the ONLY brokerage/team with enough furniture to stage more than 2 homes at a time. We have a full warehouse of curated pieces for our professional stagers to utilize.

2. Professional Photos

This is the absolute minimum. Look at the difference below. Which house would you be more interested in viewing, or possibly purchasing? It pains me to see new listings with low-quality photos. All agents should provide this for their valued clients. The first place anyone sees a home listing is online. This first impression online is so important!

3. Professional Videos

Our brokerage was the first to offer video services with all of our listings. We are well aware of the importance of this step! Just as high-quality photos are necessary for online marketing, high-quality videos make all the difference in a home's listing campaign! Statistics show that video marketing helps to generate 66% more qualified leads for homes per year. The more views a video generates, the more potential buyers you reach.

4. Virtual Tour

Right now, more and more of the population is buying homes sight unseen. A virtual tour allows buyers can see the layout of a home as though they were walking through it in real-time. This aspect of a listing can be a huge asset when selling your home. Every offer that you generate can help to increase the sale price of your home, especially as our real estate board practices blind bidding.

5. Online Marketing and Social Media Presence

We don't just post photos online anymore. Despite having the largest organic reach of any realtor or team in Sudbury, we also pay thousands of dollars to market a new property. Our team employs social media specialists that create customized marketing plans for all of our listings to target specific buyers. We also utilize highly curated email campaigns to notify our pre-existing network of hundreds of qualified buyers and agents whenever a new listing hits the market! We have been focusing heavily on online marketing for the last several years, and continually learn and implement new strategies as the real estate market evolves.

If you are selling your home, or have a family member selling their home, I can't emphasize the importance of not skipping any of these steps. Please interview potential real estate agents and their teams to ensure they have all of your best interests at heart, and the capacity to ensure you get the most for your homes.

In a hot market, every home will sell. The true question is, will you be getting the most amount of money for your home? Make sure you aren't leaving any money on the table when it comes to selling one of your largest assets. Below is a perfect example of a client who sold their house $120,000 higher than it was previously listed with an out-of-town agent with poor listing practices.

Gardening Tips Every Gardener Should Know

Whether you have a green thumb or not, check out this list of essential gardening tips before getting started to ensure that all your plants grow and thrive.

When you're just starting out with gardening, it can seem like there's so much to know, and you've got a thousand questions. How should you plant your veggies, and what is the best soil? When should you prune your hydrangeas and divide your hostas? Is everything getting enough sunlight and water? The good news is that nature is a terrific teacher. The more you garden, the more you'll learn about what works and what doesn't.

Gardening Tips for Growing Conditions

Understand what matters when it comes to environment, weather, and which plants to pick for your garden.

Know your USDA Hardiness Zone. Use it as a guide to avoid planting trees, shrubs, and perennials that won't survive winters in your area. You'll also get a better idea of when to expect your last frost date in spring, so you know when you can plant vegetables, fruits, and annuals outside in your area.

Learn the length of your growing season (the time between your last frost in spring and first frost in fall) so you can start some plants indoors or avoid growing them.

Pay close attention to how much light different plants need. Grow vegetables in a location that gets at least 8 hours of direct sunlight every day. Most vegetables need full sun to produce the best harvest. Try growing cool-season crops such as lettuce, spinach, radishes, and cabbage if you have some shade.

Some plants flower in response to day length. Chrysanthemums, poinsettias, strawberries, and others need long nights to flower. If you want strawberries that flower and produce fruit when temperatures are between 35°F and 85°F, choose a variety labeled "day-neutral."

Native species of plants are often better adapted to growing in your region than plants from other places in the world. They also are better for local pollinators that evolved with them. If you want to grow plants to support pollinators, avoid newer cultivars with double flowers because all the extra petals make it harder for insects to reach the nectar and pollen.

Gardening Tips for Pruning and Trimming

Once your plants are growing, you'll want to know how to keep them pruned and trimmed to encourage continued blooms and keep them looking beautiful. Not sure when to prune? Here's a helpful gardening tip: prune spring-flowering shrubs, such as lilacs, immediately after the blooms fade. They set their flower buds in autumn on last year's growth. If you prune them in fall or winter, you remove next spring's flower buds.

Deadheading is a good practice for perennials and annuals. Because annual plants' goal is to flower, set seed, and die, removing old blooms tells annual plants to produce more flowers. Removing spent flowers also encourages plants to use their energy to grow stronger leaves and roots instead of seed production. Avoid deadheading plants grown primarily for decorative fruits or pods, such as money plants (Lunaria).

Deadhead spent flowers on spring-blooming bulbs such as daffodils and hyacinths, so the plants send energy to the bulbs instead of making seeds. Leave the foliage until it turns brown and can be removed with a gentle tug. The leaves store nutrients needed for the bulb to bloom the following year. Braiding or tying the leaves is not recommended because it reduces the amount of light that reaches the leaf surfaces.

Gardening Tips for Soil and Water

The soil content and amount of water plants need varies, so make sure your soil is the right kind with the best amendments and nutrients, and that you aren't overwatering or underwatering.

Apply only composted, rotted manure that has cured for at least six months to your soil. Fresh manure is too high in nitrogen and can "burn" plants; it may also contain pathogens or parasites. Manure from pigs, dogs, and cats should never be used in gardens or compost piles because they may contain parasites that can infect humans.

Fertilizer is not the answer to growing the best plants; soil quality is. Add organic amendments such as compost and well-aged manure to your soil. The best soil structure is crumbly, easy to dig, readily accepts water, and loose enough to provide oxygen for plant roots. If you use fertilizer, use an organic one to add nitrogen, phosphate, and potash (the form of potassium plants can use).

Avoid digging or planting in wet soil; working it damages the soil structure. Wait until the soil is crumbly and no longer forms a ball when you squeeze some in your hand (it doesn't have to be bone-dry) to till or dig.

Understand your soil's drainage. Roots need oxygen, and if your soil is consistently wet, there are no air pockets for the roots to thrive. Many plants prefer well-drained soil, so amend your soil with organic materials to improve the soil quality.

Most in-ground garden plants grow best with 1 to 2 inches of water per week. If not enough rain falls, water deeply once a week instead of lightly each day. Frequent, shallow watering only moistens the top layer of soil and encourages the plant's roots to move there instead of growing deeper.

Don't send your fall leaves away! Instead, chop them up and use them as compost ingredients. Pulverized leaves can be left to nourish the lawn. After several hard freezes, when plants have gone completely dormant, you also can use 3-6 inches of shredded leaves as mulch over tender perennials to keep them that way over winter. Remove the mulch in spring.

Gardening Tips for Planting and Transplanting

Planting new plants and transplanting established ones can make or break the success of their growth and how they thrive.

Perennials generally need three years to achieve their mature size after you plant them. Remember the adage that they "sleep, creep, and leap" each year respectively.

Hostas don't need to be divided unless you want to rejuvenate an old plant, increase the number you have, or prefer the look of single plants. The best times to divide your hostas are in the spring, as the new shoots appear and before the leaves unfurl, or in the fall, at least four weeks before your soil freezes solid.

Plant spring-blooming bulbs, such as tulips, fritillarias, ornamental alliums, and crocuses, in the fall before the ground freezes. In general, place the bulb in a hole that's two to three times the depth of the bulb. You only need to plant most hardy bulbs once, and they'll keep coming up year after year, but hybrid tulips are an exception. It's best to pull them up when they are done blooming, replant new tulip bulbs each fall, or choose tulip species that become perennial.
